

Engaging dads in your students' education.

Discover why The Fathering Project is valued by schools

We engage your father community to support students to achieve better academically, relate better socially, cope better emotionally and enjoy better development outcomes.

Research shows that when fathers are engaged in children's education, student grades and test scores improve, attendance increases, and students are more involved in school activities.

The Fathering Project develops resources, provides programs and hosts events specific to the engagement style and needs of dads and father-figures.

For a $1,000 contribution, we provide effective fathering programs that benefit your school and students including:

- Strengthening collaborative partnerships between families and the school
- Increased father connectedness with school
- More parents engaging in school activities
- Increased student self-esteem and resilience
- Reduced bullying behaviours
- More diversity in parent engagement
- More support and understanding of school staff and procedures

Why Your Schools Needs to Engage Fathers

A national study of Australian children proved father-child times in educational activities result in significant improvements in the child's cognitive function.

Students with fathers who parent proactively perform better academically, socially, emotionally and enjoy better health outcomes.

Effective fathering programs enhance the school's reputation in the community by strengthening collaborative partnerships between families and the school to foster a stronger and more effective school environment.

Students with involved dads are less likely to engage in anti-social, unhealthy and risky behaviours

The Fathering Project's research based resources and evidence backed programs have been proven to successfully engage fathers within the school community.

Not only do these initiatives provide an ideal opportunity to upskill fathers in supporting their children's social and emotional wellbeing, they provide the link for schools to strengthen partnerships with fathers in all aspects of their child's education.

Click to contact

Contribution: $1,000 Can you afford not to support your students for this value?

admin@thefatheringproject.org

www.thefatheringproject.org

1300 FATHERS (1300 328 4377)